Rudolf Raymond Malveaux was born April 22, 1966 to Rudolf and Sidney Malveaux. He grew up in Houston, TX where he attended Piney Point Elementary School, Gregg Elementary School, and Hartman Jr High School. Rudy graduated from Booker T. Washington High School in 1984. Rudy was a very proud alumnus of University of Texas in Austin where he pledged Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Inc.

Rudy moved to the Austin area in 1984 to attend school and has been a productive member of his community ever since. Rudy embraced the entrepreneurial spirit while living in the city. Rudy loved politics and was a proud democrat, where he worked to get many democrats elected in this city.

Rudy loved being social and he was the type of person who was always welcoming. He loved to cook, play dominoes, and talk politics and sports. Rudy loved the city of Austin and the people whom he called friends.

Rudy was preceded in death by his grandmother Margaret Bell (aka Aunt Top) and father, Rudolf Malveaux.

Rudy is survived by his mother, Sidney Malveaux and a host of relatives and friends who love him and will miss him dearly.

“Wow! I knew he was ill. I am still shocked and saddened by the loss of my friend. Rudy and I grew up together in the Houston area. We attended the same elementary school from the old neighborhood. I remember him mom allowing me to hang out with him at their apartment to play video games. I also still remember the old jingle folk used to tease him with 😭

I went off to the military and he off to college. We were just reconnecting over the past few years.

He never let me downplay my greatness. He always called me out for shrinking away from a challenge.

I'll truly miss his “cutting to the chase” on a lot of my own hesitations and apprehensions.

Damn! We lost a great one! Wish we had more time!

If anyone who reads this knows where he is interred or how to connect with his mother, please contact me, Ferrel Bonner, at fbonner1906@gmail.com

“ I encountered Rudy Malveaux during the Reelection campaign of Travis County Commissioner Ron Davis in 2012. Mr. Malveaux possessed a commanding presence and an engaging personality. He was also known for his excellent sense of humor.

He demonstrated resolute confidence in his own capabilities and assuredness in achieving whatever he set out to do. His intelligence is evident, as he expressed to me, "Louis, I am very intelligent."

He effectively communicated with diverse groups, including street people, gang members, and scholars.

He had a tough guy's exterior, but internally he was thoughtful and compassionate. He loved his mother and took care of her until he couldn't. As tough as he was, he allowed others to see his vulnerability.

He loved God first, but eating BBQ was a close second.

May God comfort and the family during this challenging time.
