“ I met Zane in wilco lol! He walks up and says "I don't believe in accidents" "we in this place at this time for a reason" we talked about him being Hebrew Israelite, he gave me some very important upper room knowledge that I still refer to and use to this day. Every night I sat on his bunk and we traded war story's. I don't know his parents but he revered his father and spoke very highly of him. He told me to look him up when we got out. I still remember he said it's Zane Elijah gildon, it don't work if you try an look me up without the Elijah. I could feel something biblical and powerful about the Elijah part of his name. I looked him up when released on Facebook. This is where it's a little crazy to some. But just like him I don't believe in accidents or coincidences. I'm not from Austin I'm from Waco. When his page came up he was friends with the boyfriend of a girl from Waco who was the bm of my gfs bd. I knew it was meant to be at that moment. Met him in the Eastside that night. We sat in the car and just talked. Nobody was fresher than Zane. I called him golden gildon and he liked that. He smiled like "yea, that'll work" he was so proud of his kids. So authentic when he spoke. Had no fear of nothing. Impressed a lot on me in such a short time. We couldn't have been more different, I'm twice his age and white, you would never expect us to be such good friends so fast. I googled him tonight3-17-24 looking for contact info, I had no idea bc I had moved. Damn we lost something special. I'm sad in my heart. So mote it be, rest In peace golden gildon. Don't forget you can do anything without the 0- see you when I see you. A S.A.P..

“ Ain't never had a friend like him.. one of a kind. The fact that you're gone stings but knowing you're still here in spirit to watch over who you've left enlightens the hearts of your children, family and friends. I wish I would've called you the night you left us, but knowing that our friendship was at a good stand point when you left is enough I can't ask too much of our savior when he gives me enough as it is. I miss you bro and since I found out you were gone it's been crazy but I'll forever hold it down for you it's what friends do. Rest In Paradise until im able to meet you there. #Zane #ZG
